

This chapter examines the historical forces since settlement in Virginia that planted Whiteness in the colonies that made up what would become the United States. It explores the administration of Whiteness in Virginia society and institutions in ways that are instructive to understanding how Whiteness has manifested across time and space.